Dear Gentlemen:

Thank you for being in the orbit of the National Museum of the Marine Corps through your purchase of commemorative bricks, your bronze plaque dedicated to fallen comrades, and the contribution of a copy of "Whatever Happened to B Company?" for our library.

Our galleries can only capture isolated moments or the broad strokes of history, not all the individual stories we want to tell. By capturing the photographs and biographies of TBS 1-67, you narrowed the lens of history and force the reader to slow down and appreciate the moment and the Marines. I especially appreciated learning about the post-Marine Corps careers of these talented Marines and couldn't help but wonder what those who died too soon would have accomplished.

We will deposit this book in our reference library, with appreciation.

Please stop by and say hello the next time you visit the Museum, perhaps when you come to view the new art gallery or see the Medal of Honor Theater and the new film, "We, The Marines."

With kindest regards,

Lin Ezell
Director
